

How do I feel about living in the boarding house? Am I adjusting well?

Answer:

Living in the boarding house has been tough, especially with the shift from not worrying about money to budgeting carefully. I enjoy the freedom and fewer rules, but I've realized that if I don't manage my budget, I might end up with nothing to eat. Even small things like saving money on food matter a lot now. Although it was overwhelming at first to set my own rules, I'm starting to adjust and appreciate what life is really about.

What actions have been taken so I can adapt to my new place?

Answer:

To adapt to my new place, I've accepted that this is what I wanted living away from PN. I'm thankful for my roommates because we treat our room like home and work together on budgeting, especially for electricity. Treating the boarding house like home has helped me adjust more easily.

How do I get along with my roommates?

Answer:

I get along well with my roommates since we are friends. We make sure to understand each other and keep a good relationship.

How would I describe the cleanliness and upkeep of the boarding house?

Answer:

I keep the boarding house clean, just like PN taught us. Even though I might not be the tidiest person, I make sure our room stays clean, and we all pitch in to keep it that way.

Are there any issues with shared spaces, like the kitchen or bathroom?

Answer:

I don't have any problems with the shared spaces like the kitchen or bathroom because I'm used to managing these areas.

How do I feel about the location of the boarding house? Is it convenient for my daily routine? Is it safe?

Answer:

The location of the boarding house is very convenient for me since it's close to my workplace. It's also safe and peaceful.
